Lecture title:

The Paradigm Shift for Higher Education

For almost two years, there have been institutional shifts in practices, policies, and innovative approaches to change. This phase of a revolution of postsecondary education demonstrates that our 'lived experience' is not intended to last or remain unchanged permanently. This realization has been growing in awareness but is accelerated by a national pandemic. College planning has taken on a new meaning as variables of change. It encompasses and requires a recognition that there is a systemic confluence of forces that encompass infrastructure, technology, people, and social justice. Without continuous adaptation and thinking smarter, quicker, and more innovatively, an effective college will fail to integrate the dynamics of accelerated change, as they affect each institution's policies, people, finances and student success outcomes. Join us to discuss the paradigm shift and its potential impact on our educational infrastructure, ecosystem, and role.

Supporting the Charles E. Carpenter Lecture and Conference Endowment

In 2004, Betty Duvall and Dale Parnell established an endowment in honor of their colleague, Charles E. Carpenter, and his lifelong commitment to community college leadership issues. This endowment directly supports the annual Charles Carpenter Memorial Lecture, an opportunity for students, alumni and educational leaders to come together to learn from a nationally recognized speaker about current trends in community college education and to network with other professionals.

To ensure the long-term viability of the Charles Carpenter Memorial Lecture series, consistent and dependable funding is essential. Funds generated by this endowment allow us to continue inviting leading experts on community college issues to the region and help offset other costs associated with the lectureship.

Thanks to Doreene Carpenter and her family, as well as other generous friends and alumni, we have already raised over $120,000. Now, the College of Education, Oregon State's community college leadership group, and the Carpenter family invite you to help us grow the program even more.

If you would like to discuss giving or have any questions about the endowment, please contact Tom McLennan, senior director of development at the OSU Foundation, at 541-231-6753 or tom.mclennan@osufoundation.org.
